CHIEF OILER BURKHARDT HAS A PROBLEM

Brauns Recreation team cut the Robinson's Tavern lead as they took one game from Cooper and Hostert while the Robins lost three games to Mokena Wallpaper Co. The Robins now lead the league by three games. It was a banner night for the tail end teams as they trimmed the leading teams. Capt. Willard Marti's Bankers altered lineup put new life in the team so they went on to down the Mokena Oilers for two games. Looks like Chief Oiler Charlie Burkhardt has a problem on his hands as his team dropped three games to the V-Eighters the week before who also had altered their lineup. If the teams keep changing their lineups and cross him up he is apt to pull something out of the bag one of these nites and woe be the team. The Red hot Paper hangers were really steaming when they swept three games from the Robinsons Tavern. Andy Bueschel looked like the Bueschel of old as he hung up a 543 series with Rudy Marshke following him with 524.

Pilots Bale Out; Land 3 Miles From Scene of Crash

Last Saturday night about 10 o'clock farmers in the vicinity of 135 St. in Orland Township were startled when they heard an airplane crash. The plane made a nose-dive and landed on the Brandt farm on 135th St. The wings were torn off and the motor was buried about 3 feet in the ground.

The craft was an army plane inbound from Kansas City and is said to have run out of gas and got out of control while flying over Orland township.

The two pilots baled out at an altitude of about 5,000 feet. There was quite a strong breeze and they were carried to Palos Heights before they came down, about 3 miles from where the plane landed. One of the men is said to have landed in a tree and was injured. He was reported to have been taken to the Oak Forest Infirmary hospital for treatment.

Shortly after the plane crashed, a detail of soldiers arrived and guarded the field where the plane landed, with fixed bayonets and did not let anyone on the grounds. The next morning the wrecked plane was hauled away.

One Orland farmer saw the plane all lit up circling wildly in the sky and then suddenly take a nose dive straight down.

Frankfort Couple Married At Pretty Candlelight Service

At a pretty candlelight ceremony solemnized Sunday afternoon at St. Peter's Evang. church Frankfort, Miss Lois Lorenzen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lorenzen became the bride of Harold Ebert, son of Mrs. Caroline Ebert. Rev. A. Fleer of Chicago officiated.

Preceding the ceremony, Miss Lillian Collins, Colleague of the American Guild of Organists, who presided at the organ, played a group of love songs and accompanied Arthur Lambrecht who sang, "Because". Following the exchange of rings, Mr. Lambrecht sang Malotte's "Lord's Prayer".

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attractive in a gown of white satin, fashioned with a lace yoke and full gathered skirt, which fell into a long train. Her finger tip veil of illusion net, was bordered with lace and held in place with a tiara of seed pearls. She wore a strand of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom, and for something old, chose her grandmother's gold bracelet worn at her wedding sixty years ago. Her flowers were white roses and white sweet peas.

Miss Irene Ebert, sister of the groom was maid of honor and wore a gown of powder blue grosgrain taffeta with a bouffant overskirt of net. Her blusher veil was of the same colors and she carried pink roses and sweet peas.

Norman Lorenzen, brother of the bride, served as best man and Carl Ebert and Glenn Schroeder were ushers. The Bridal March from Wagner's Lohengrin and Mendelssohn's Wedding March were used as the processional and recessional.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church parlors for about 50 guests.

Table appointments were in blue and white and a three tiered wedding cake centered the table of the bridal party. Mrs. Ebert was formerly employed in the office of the A C Bauch garage and Mr. Ebert is employed at the Baumgartner Construction Co. After a short trip the young couple will reside at the Ebert home for the present.

The first big armament battle of North Africa gave a foretaste of the severe nature of the fighting which lies ahead of the Allies before the Axis can be cleared out of that front. The Allied forward base at Gafsa (4) had been abandoned earlier. The retirement from Gafsa was not completely unexpected.

Washington, D. C.
THE AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT

In the last few days the President himself has silenced administration critics of Claude Wickard, and decreed that he remain as secretary of agriculture.

The President's stand came at the height of an increasing storm brewing round the amiable Indiana corn farmer, whom everyone likes but whose all-important food program is lagging.

White House advisers have told the President that Wickard's program was inadequate, that it must be drastically revised, that there would be shocking deficiencies of food. Some have urged that Wickard be replaced.

The President, however, has defended his secretary of agriculture. But also he has appointed White House Secretary Lauchlin Currie—whose regular field is Chinese relations—to act as umpire on the farm program. Currie has given Wickard a nine-point program for revamping American agriculture and among other things has pointed out that England increased her food production 50 per cent with little additional manpower. Why, he asks, cannot the United States do the same?

AGRICULTURE'S PROGRAM

Here are Currie's proposals, advanced with the blessing of the White House:

1. The goals of agricultural production should be higher.
2. A new production program, possibly with a new budget, should be presented to congress.
3. All acreage allotments and other restrictions on production should be removed to encourage the more efficient farmers.
4. The 1,000,000 farm operators of second rate efficiency should be brought into full production with the aid of seed, fertilizer, livestock, machinery and even land.
5. Cotton and tobacco acreage should be reduced, corn acreage, allotments removed entirely, and more wheat should be fed to livestock.
6. Profiting by British example, a new "land army" should be organized, to use town and city dwellers, especially women, for farm work.
7. Truck farmers who produce such luxuries as iceberg lettuce should be converted to more essential crops.
8. Facilities for processing and drying foods should be increased.
9. Local direction of the farm program should be shifted away from Farm-bureau-minded agents, toward agents more responsive to federal direction.

WICKARD'S FARM PROGRAM

Wickard's response to this sweeping proposal was to accept part of it, reject part.

He believes the production goals are already high enough that it's too late to present a new program for 1943, that cotton goals have already been substantially lowered, and tobacco reduction would require change of the law.

He agrees to removal of acreage restrictions on most crops, but not on cotton and wheat, which still yield embarrassing surpluses.

Claude is a little touchy on the question of county agents and committees, insisting that federal representation is adequate.

FULL PRODUCTION

On other points, however, he agrees with the White House proposals, declaring some already are in effect. He wants to bring the 1,000,000 less efficient farmers into full production, to increase dehydration of foods, convert truck farmers from iceberg lettuce, etc., and organize a new land army from towns and cities. In fact, he already has a plan well advanced for the "land army."

Wickard, who had hardly been heard of before his elevation to Wallace's place in the cabinet, has had clear sailing for two years, thanks in part to good weather.

Now, however, he is facing just as tough a job in trying to produce more, as Wallace faced ten years ago in trying to produce less. No secretary of agriculture ever faced more opposite and more difficult problems. The average person realizes the problems confronting the secretary of agriculture. They are exceedingly complex.

Wickard knows his position is shaky. But he is on his mettle, fighting to meet the established production goals.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Munro Leaf, who wrote Ferdinand the Bull, hailed as a children's classic on pacifism, has now got himself a captain's commission in the army, and is more belligerent than any West Pointer. He even believes that it is sacrilegious to criticize anyone in the army, or anything the army does—especially the services of supply, to which he is detailed.

When Postmaster General Frank Walker was shown a recent news photo of himself, he said, "Is that Herbert Hoover or me?"

The World
Food Problem

By Herbert Hoover

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

There are more horsemen that follow modern war than at the time the Apocalypse was written. In modern total war, Famine and Pestilence are accompanied by four new recruits—whose names are Revolution, Unemployment, Suspicion and Hate. These additional destroyers make the job harder to manage.

That there is and will be famine in this world of today, needs little demonstration. Already 148,000,000 people in the occupied democracies in Europe and Asia are short of food; millions of them are actually starving, and our Allies are obviously running on very short rations.

The Nazis' food supply is sufficient for their evils of today. They are working herds of prisoners on the farms and robbing some of the occupied territories. But their internal production will grow worse as the war goes on and there is less to steal from the subjected peoples.

In fact, the whole of Europe will continue to degenerate in domestic food supply. The reasons for that are simple enough: Europe in peacetime—and by Europe I mean Britain and all of Europe excluding Russia—has to import large amounts of food for human beings. That is now cut off by the blockade, except to Britain, and some small amounts to the neutral countries.

Decline in Field Crops.

On top of this, under the pressure of total war, field crops decline year by year. Manpower and horsepower are increasingly drained to the war; farm implements cannot be replaced; fertilizers are diverted to explosives; planting is less effective, and harvesting less perfect. Also, the animals in Europe are in considerable degree dependent upon imported feed. In consequence of the blockade, some part of the dairy and breeding herds must be slaughtered early in total war, and domestic feed for the remaining animals decreases because more fields must be turned to direct food for humans—and still more of the flocks and herds must be slaughtered.

In the last war, the principal food animals of Europe—cattle, hogs and sheep—decreased by over 70,000,000 head, and that is again taking place. The invaluable chicken vanishes, and fishing is greatly diminished. Thus the stream of animal products steadily decreases. To all this must be added the ravages of armies and scorched-earth policies.

Nor will famine this time be limited to Europe, for these causes are also working in Asia and Russia.

It is difficult for Americans to picture widespread hunger or starvation. We have not had such a thing in America.

What Starvation Means.

Nation-wide hunger and starvation mean grim suffering, incalculable grief over wilting children, physical degeneration, stunted growth, distorted, embittered minds and death. Its lasting effect is one of degree and time. Adults can recuperate from months of undernourishment. Children can stand less. In fact, the undersized, rickets, and the death rate among children are the sensitive barometers of starvation. Not even during our Civil war was there a town or city where these effects reached one-tenth of what they are in certain cities of the occupied democracies at this moment.

From all food shortages comes the danger of pestilence. People do not often die directly from starvation. Their resistance is weakened and they fall easy prey to contagions. Moreover, people consume their available fat supplies and have little or none left for soap. Uncleanliness invites such scourges as typhus—which is transmitted by body lice.

There is another vital peril in this question. Unless these masses of people in scores of nations can have food and be protected from pestilence, there can be no social or political or spiritual stability upon which peace can be built.

We had a parallel experience with this problem after the First World War. In that famine, America bore the major load of supplies, finance and administration. Except for American food preparedness there would then have been the greatest sacrifice of human life in all history.

That America succeeded in its task is evidenced by grateful statements of every government in Europe.

No nation had ever undertaken such a mission before. We had to pioneer through the thickets and swamps of governmental, social, financial and economic problems, including human nature in the raw. From that experience, we can make some estimate as to the need next time, the source of supplies, and the strategy and tactics necessary to defeat both famine and pestilence and to set millions upon the road back to strength and health.

If you would have your broom last, do not stand it on the bristles; hang it up or rest it on the handle.

Coins are hard on a man's change pocket. Should a hole occur, an emergency repair may be made by sticking a piece of adhesive tape on both sides of the hole.

If you want your artificial flowers to stay the way you arrange them, half fill the vase with fine sand. Press the stems into this and they will remain in place.

RUBBER

Rubber ball sports, baseball, football, tennis, etc., really had their beginning back in the 16th century. Someone has reported that in 1520 Emperor Montezuma entertained Cortez and his soldiers in Mexico City with a game played with rubber balls.

Overloading and over-inflation are two rubber-wasting practices most common with motor truck operators.

Plantation rubber had its beginning in 1876 when Henry Wickham had planted in the Kew Botanic Gardens in London some of the 7,000 Hevea brasiliensis seeds he had smuggled out of the jungles of Brazil. A few years later trees were transplanted to the Far East.

A car traveling on packed snow at 20 mph when braked will travel 79 feet before coming to a stop if it is not equipped with anti-skid chains on the rear wheels. Attachment of chains will stop the car traveling under the same conditions in 40 feet.

Half the time required for mending is usually taken up in getting everything together at a convenient time. This portable stand equipped and ready can be placed beside your easy chair in a jiffy with everything handy to make mending for victory a pleasant task.

If you can't find a pair of old metal drawer handles there are many designs at the dime stores made of composition and wood. The lid may be painted or stained as desired and the box will be masked by the full skirt tacked to the under part of the lid edge. If you wish to line the upper part, cut pieces of cardboard to fit the sides and bottom. Cover these with chintz; add a strip of belting ribbon to the side sections, catching it down to make holders for equipment; then glue the sections in place.

NOTE: If you missed the article which illustrated how the body of the phonograph cabinet was used, it is contained in BOOK 9, together with thirty-one other conservation plans. Copy of BOOK 9 will be sent to you for 15 cents in coins. Address:

MURDER at PIRATE'S HEAD

By ISABEL WAITT

W-N-U RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Judy Jason, who is telling the story, receives an anonymous letter enclosing $800 and asking her to bid for an abandoned church to be auctioned the next day. The body of a man identified as Roddy Lane is found in a chest in the basement of the church, but disappears a few hours later. Victor Quade finds Hugh Norcross' golf club near the chest. A fish shed burns, apparently killing an old man named Brown. Uncle Wylie's pipe is found near the shed. Suspicion hovers around Uncle Wylie's head as he tells of his only meeting with old man Brown. Wylie is speaking.

Now continue with Judy's story.

CHAPTER IX

"Told me he had permission to stay in that shack long as he liked. Didn't ask him who from. None of my business. Old shed ain't been used since bootleggin' days, when the police rounded up a cache of liquor."

"Hush, Wylie. That ain't got nothing to do with this. You only saw the poor old feller once after that, didn't you?"

"Time he was fishin' off the rocks, you mean. Funny thing about that," my uncle ruminated. "Cloudy day and he was over near the Pirate's Mouth. I was afraid he might fall in. There's a path, but it's mighty dangerous. I yelled at him, and by thunder—maybe 'twas a coincidence—but he looked around and saw me. Then he disappeared. I tore after him, but he wasn't in the Pirate's Mouth. Climbed up the other side, I guess. Anyway, I saw his light time I got back."

"Do you mean that old man got back to his shack before you did? Beat you to it?" Victor asked incredulously.

"Not exactly. It was cloudy and dark, the way it suddenly does when it's fixin' up to thunder, but I could see he wasn't in the Pirate's Mouth, nor sloshing around in the waters below. I wanted to take a look at the church, knowing about the auction and all. Nella—Mrs. Gerry's always hankered after that location. I was wonderin' if 'twould pay to turn the building into a bungalow and sell the inn. Nella ain't so spry as—"

"I don't see—" Bessie Norcross got no farther.

"The police will see plenty," Victor said. "Mr. Gerry, you'll certainly give them much to think about. Thank you for telling us about this mysterious Mr. Brown, who's neither short nor tall, wears thick glasses, uses an earphone, but turns when he's unexpectedly yelled at, comes from nowhere just before things begin to occur on the Head, is old and apparently feeble, yet could climb into and out of that Pirate's Mouth so rapidly that he'd disappeared by the time you reached the spot, though you tore after him. H'm'm'm, very interesting, don't you think, Mr. Quincy?"

"Beats the way I manage without my chair."

I was having a conniption over what Uncle Wylie had said about buying the church. It was ridiculous to suppose he'd sent me the money.

I leaned over and whispered into Uncle Wylie's ear: "Did you send me that mazuma?"

"Huh?" I repeated the question, only substituting the word money. He acted dumb as anything, and started fishing in his pocket, and drew out some change.

"How much you want? Only got 73 cents."

I excused myself and ran into the house. It was high time I told Victor about that letter. He could do stunts with it; make them all write their names and compare the penmanship or something.

The rooms were a mess. We'd have to quit this business and clean up the inn and start lunch, pretty soon. Some of the beds had been tossed together in my hasty search for Roddy's diamond ring, but that was all. My own room didn't even have the clothes airing. I flung them back in a heap and ran to the bureau.

The letter was gone! I couldn't believe it. Maybe it wasn't the top drawer, where I stuck it under the paper lining. I tried the others, knowing the futility. Then I went back to the top one again, tossing my belongings helter-skelter. There was no doubt about it.

I got down on my hands and knees and looked under the bureau. I even moved it from the wall. No dice. What a sap I'd been to leave it in my room. Well, anyway, I could repeat the contents. But now there'd be no way to get a slant on the writing. I recalled how sprawling it had been, backhanded and every which way, in the attempt to disguise it. There could no longer be doubt about that.

I began suddenly to be terribly afraid. Did the person who tried to use me have any connection with the foul deeds which followed? Was I dealing with a killer? A murderer who knew I still had half a thousand dollars of his in my possession? Why the Old Harry should a perfect stranger wish to present me with a team, anyway?

Not Aunt Nella. She'd never let anybody do her bidding, nor pass on a sum like that. Uncle Wylie I discarded. Roddy Lane? But why should he want the old church? He did, I knew, because he'd said so. He'd also said he was planning to bid at the auction. "Prepare for some lively bidding," he'd said that night at supper. Would he mail me cash and then bid, too? Not likely. Not unless—could he be that subtle? Could he have chosen this method, for reasons of his own, and be hiding around the Head? In which case he'd blown up the bridge and killed Brown. The fire might have been an accident, but the hand I'd seen in the sea chest wasn't. There's something about a dead hand—Ugh!

I could feel little chills creeping up and down my spine. Any minute I expected to hear a voice demand back its $500. I ran into the hall, and, as the old stairs creaked behind me, I paced down, nearly losing my balance, and screaming as I went.

The whole piazza rose in a mass and came running to meet me.

"Judy!" Aunt Nella cried.

"What's the matter, Judy?" Hugh met me at the stairs and caught me to him. "Are you all right?"

"Sure she's all right," Bessie got between her brother and me.

"I—I'm nervous, I guess," I faltered, sitting down on the stairs.

"It's nothing, really. Go—go on with your seance."

"See anyone upstairs?" Lily wanted to know.

"Of course not." Goodness, I mustn't give way like that. "I don't know why I screamed. Got to thinking of—of what I saw in the chest."

"We're all pretty much keyed up," Auntie said. "Judy, you come out to the kitchen and help me start the chowder."

But I wouldn't. I signaled to Victor Quade, and when he came over to my side I whispered: "Just you. Come."

I went on into my little office, and he scattered the rest. Didn't

"Told me he had permission to stay in that shack."

they all want a breathing space? Why not go in a body down to look at the Pirate's Mouth, and also at the golf club, to see if someone had borrowed Mr. Norcross? Would they wait for him? Meet at the steps in ten minutes?

They would. Unanimously.

"Well, Miss Judy, what's bothering you?" Victor sat down in the old Morris chair where Uncle Wylie often retreated with his pipe when things got too warm for him in the kitchen.

I closed the door. When I turned and saw Victor Quade's glowing eyes boring darkly into mine, I was struck again by his odd resemblance to Roddy Lane. If Lane had had a brother—I! But I knew better. And when he smiled at me, how different from the Lane leer. Such magnificent teeth! I sighed faintly, thinking for a moment how handsome the man was. Then I plunged into the strange incident of the letter.

"An anonymous letter, you say?" "It was merely signed—'A Friend.' Inclosed were forty twenty-dollar bills."

"May I see this epistle?" I felt full of confusion. What an idiot I'd been to leave it in a bureau drawer—the first place anyone would look. I had to admit I'd been a chump; that the letter was gone.

Victor began to rock backward and forward in a gawky old chair, sitting up on the edge of it now, as if the swaying movement helped him think. He shook his head slowly and smiled at me: "You couldn't know, of course, but I'm afraid you did pull a boner."

"But he said, 'Don't tell a soul.' Oh, I'm not excusing myself. I know it was stupid. The 'sentimental reasons' got me. And that's another thing—before the auction, when we, the guests, I mean, were all discussing bidding in the Rev. Jonas De Witt used those very words."

"What words?"

"Sentimental reasons.' He'd like, he said, to own the old Quaker church for sentimental reasons."

"Used to hold services there, didn't he?"

"Said so. Not since my time, though he had the Rockville congregation—"

Victor stopped me with a gesture "I know. We want to get going with the rest of the crew. We can investigate the minister and his prison record later. Think you could remember most of that letter? Where was it postmarked? Notice the date?"

Three questions. The postmark had been Boston. The date was blurred, but I'd found it in the letterbox the day before the auction, which was, as he knew, July 3. "Good heavens! Was it only yesterday?"

Victor nodded, prompting: "So the letter came in the regular mail, July 2? Who has come to the inn since then?"

"Nobody but you," I said. "Roddy came at suppertime that night."

"H-m-m-m," Victor considered, his strong white hands patting noisily together. "Quite a coincidence. You get the wherewithal to buy the church from an unknown. Roddy Lane arrives. There's rumor he's hidden bank funds somewhere on the Head. Lane disappears, though his car is still here. An old recluse is burned to death, who may have discovered Lane's secret horde, or seen him uncovering it."

"But—but—you're forgetting the diamond ring!" I cried. "Roddy'd never leave that. Mr. Quincy noticed it that night and said it was a very valuable stone, remember?"

"Judy, before you do anything else, jot down the letter. I'll go along out now. You might tear out the page of signatures in your inn register. Copy that, couldn't you? Maybe the writing of one of them would give you a clue."

I began to shake. "You think one of our guests did it—a double murder?"

"Don't go jumping to conclusions like that. We've only one corpus delicti. There may be another in the sea. If ever we get into communication with the mainland, we may find out."

"If we had some mush we'd have some mush and milk if we had some milk."

"Exactly. Meanwhile, whether Lane killed Brown and swam the gut, or vice versa; or whether one of the inn crowd did them both in and is still with us, the fact remains your letter is probably connected with it. The police will tear the church to pieces. Dig up the basement. Blast the cliff. You get that letter down, and suppose—"

He checked himself, staring at me in a frowning way that made me wonder where I'd failed until he said:

"The rest of that money. Five hundred? Judy, he may want it back. That keep-the-change stuff might not go for so large a sum." (My very thought.) "Have you a safe here?"

I laughed at the idea. "We're poor," I reminded him. "Taking boarders!"

"Well, don't keep it on your person. Were they new bills? In sequence?"

"In sequence? The numbers? I didn't think to look at them very closely. They weren't new. Old. I'd say. Not in order as you might get them from a bank."

"They wouldn't be. Whoever sent them is far too clever. Put them back in your drawer. Might be a good idea to tell everybody about the letter you received, its loss, and that whoever took it would find the cash in the same place. I don't want you to go away by yourself after this. Keep with somebody you can trust all the time—like your aunt or your uncle."

It was then I confessed Aunt Nella was really no relative of mine, nor her husband, either.

I could trust him, Victor said, and the way he glanced at me made me blush till I was afraid he'd see it. I reached for the register to hide my confusion, and opened it at the blotter.

"Mr. Quade, look! All the signatures have been torn out!" We examined the torn ledger, hunting fruitlessly in the waste-basket.

Victor's eyes gleamed. "That's where he made a boner. Did—did Lane register that night?"

"No. I put his name down, though. See, back here. He was only a mealer. 'One supper—75 cents.' There it is."

"And I suppose everybody's been in here to telephone."

"Uh-huh. Even you—when you found the wires were cut."

He inquired then when I'd missed the letter, and I had to admit I'd only just discovered it wasn't there when I went up to get it to show to him. I hadn't looked at it since I hid it under the paper lining in my bureau drawer.

Somebody wasn't taking wny chances of having his or her signature compared with the letter-writing. Maybe he was afraid of not disguising some peculiarity enough. Experts can tell every time. But now there's only the contents, as you remember them, to go by."

"Then how did he make a boner?" "Just this: If Old Man Brown came in here he'd have been seen by one of the guests. Mr. Quincy is usually on the piazza. That Kendall woman is ubiquitous. No, Brown didn't get in. I doubt if Lane did. His handwriting wasn't there, you say. But somebody's was. Somebody who was sparring for time till he found and destroyed the letter he'd sent you."

BIBLE TEACHINGS AGAINST DRUNKENNESS

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel 30:16, 17; Isaiah 28:14, 15; Galatians 5:19-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it."—Isaiah 24:9.

Sowing and reaping is one of those universal laws which applies in all realms of life. What we sow we reap, whether in the farmer's field, in our national life, or in the life of the individual. It is true physically, mentally, morally and spiritually.

How surprising then that intelligent Americans think we can go on with the use of intoxicants which have destroyed other nations and expect to escape the same sad consequences. Professional men have wrecked their careers, business men lost their hard earned positions, and rich men dissipated their inheritances; and at the same time each of them has fallen into moral decay—all through their inability to control their desire for drink. Yet we continue to license its sale, and so another generation of young men must meet the same temptation.

Our lesson presents three results of drunkenness.

I. Military Defeat (1 Sam. 30:16, 17).

A crisis in the life of King David is related in this chapter. The Amalekites had taken Ziklag. The king and his family were prisoners, held by a host of barbarous men far too strong for them to oppose. He inquired of God and was told to attack. With his little army of 400 men he defeated them. Why? Because in a drunken debauch they were celebrating their victory of the day before.

This was not the first, nor the last, time that military defeat followed indulgence in alcoholic beverages. It has happened even in the present war. Have we learned the lesson? Will we avoid that danger? In this country our armed forces and defense workers are constantly exposed to temptation—and how many of them fall, anyone may know who has eyes to see.

From distant battlefronts come disquieting reports that intoxicants are among the "supplies" which find quick transportation to the very front, where they are soon put to their destructive use.

II. National Decay (Isa. 28:1-4, 7).

Isaiah was a mighty voice against moral corruption, and for the righteousness of God. With true prophetic insight he saw beneath the outward prosperity and apparent glory of his people, and exposed the sins which would soon destroy them as a nation. Outstanding among these destructive forces was drunkenness.

Turning first to the northern kingdom of Israel (for the nation had now been divided), he tells them that though their valleys may be fertile and their cities resplendent, the collapse of all their boasted greatness will surely come if they live in revelry and drunkenness.

He speaks of the coming of "the mighty and the strong one" (v. 2) who will be like a destroying storm. He refers to Assyria—itsself an ungodly people, but used of God to scourge His own people who had become indulgent and sinful.

There is a truth here which we need to learn. When nations forget God and fail in their responsibilities to Him and to their fellow men; when they become vain and self-indulgent, God will bring judgment upon them. He may use as His instrument nations who are themselves pagan, to accomplish His purpose.

The people should be led in repentance and righteousness by their religious leaders. How sad that some set an example in the other direction. Others who live personal lives above reproach are silent on these important questions lest they give offense to someone who may make it difficult for them. How sad!

III. Eternal Destruction (Gal. 5:19-21).

Military loss and national declension should be enough to align every right thinking person against intoxicants. But far worse is the fact that they bring many, many men and women into eternal separation from God.

In this passage "drunkenness and revellings" find their proper place with the other works of the flesh which close the door to the kingdom of God. There is no use trying to dismiss or cover it up as the unfortunate weakness of an otherwise nice person, or the natural result of a bit of social fellowship.

America has too long regarded a drunken person as a joke—or at most a bit of a nuisance to be indulged and tolerated. The Bible says that "they who practice such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God" (v. 21).

That is plain enough, isn't it? Mr. Drinker, outside or inside the church, had you better not think about that before you drink again? Church of Christ, is it not time for you to do something more effective to deliver the young men and women of America from the constant temptation now placed before them?

TINLEY 4H NEWS

Due to circumstances beyond our control our 4H meeting schedule was disrupted this month. We held our recreation meeting Feb. 19 and our business meeting Feb. 26.

Our regular meeting was a very businesslike and instructive meeting, being called to order by Dallas Webster in the absence of our president, Ray Warnes. Following roll call was a talk by Bob Nott, on "What To Do in February." A discussion on the subject followed. Each boy told one thing to do during the month. Several good ideas were suggested.

Billy Warnes then presented the club with a certificate of appreciation from the Infantile Paralysis Foundation.

A motion was made by Laddie Stover to have the certificate framed and requested Mr. Kester and Mr. Stover to purchase the frame.

J. Alder Dean told us the do's and don'ts about a flower garden, after which each boy drew a preliminary sketch of his proposed garden. From this sketch each boy will make a drawing, to scale, to be presented to the leader's at the March 12 meeting, along with his signed membership card for 1943.

Sgt. Donald Mason, 118th Obs. Sq. Army Air Base, Camp Rucker, Ala.

Introduces Resolution To Aid Small Business Man

Rep. Virkus of LaGrange has introduced the following resolution small business from extinction due to heavy tax burdens:

A Resolution to alleviate the hardship and distress upon small business men and other taxpayers which would be caused by the requirement to pay the 1942 and 1943 Federal Income Taxes within one year.

Introduced by Mr. Virkus (R. LaGrange) for the Illinois Small Business Men's Association.

WHEREAS it is absolutely necessary for the successful prosecution of the war to impose a heavy burden of taxation upon the people of this state and of every other state in the Union, and

WHEREAS the Federal income tax now reaches down into the lower brackets of income to include practically all of the 195,825 small businessmen in the State of Illinois, and the 3,102,324 thrust this country, a large segment of which are at this time in dire distress due to regulations, restrictions, and rationing imposed on them as war measures, and

WHEREAS the Federal income tax for the first time now also includes the majority of wage and salary earners of all types, as well as those aged citizens, widows and children who depend for their very livelihood upon pensions or fixed incomes from other forms of investments, and

WHEREAS an almost unbearable burden would be imposed upon the majority of the taxpayers of the State of Illinois and of the nation if they are required to pay their 1942 income tax in the manner now provided by law and in addition to pay their 1943 income tax weekly, bi-weekly or monthly under the proposed "pay as you go" plan, and

WHEREAS the collection of local personal property, real estate and other city, county, and state taxes might be adversely affected by defaults if the income taxpayers are required to pay two years' Federal income taxes within one year, and which might seriously affect the services of city, county and state governments, now therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED by the Illinois House of Representatives, the Senate concurring herein, that the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives of the United States be, and hereby is, respectfully petitioned to adopt such method or plan for the collection of income taxes in this year, 1943, that will not impose undue hardship and distress, which would be caused by requirement to pay two years' income taxes within the year 1943, upon those small businessmen and other taxpayers in the lower brackets which are least able to meet their tax obligations to the Federal Government.

Use Your OLD Ration Book for SUGAR and COFFEE

HOW TO USE YOUR NEW RATION BOOK

TO BUY CANNED OR BOTTLED FRUITS, VEGETABLES, SOUPS, AND JUICES.

FROZEN FRUITS AND VEGETABLES; DRIED FRUITS

- The Government has set the day when this rationing will start. On or after that day, take your War Ration Book Two with you when you go to buy any kind of these processed foods.

14 POINTS

YOU GIVE MANY POINTS FOR SCARCE FOODS

8 POINTS

YOU GIVE LESS POINTS FOR FOODS THAT ARE NOT SO SCARCE

- Before you buy, find out how many points to give for the kind of processed foods you want. Prices do not set the points. The Government will set different points for each kind and size no matter what the price. Your grocer will put up the official list of points where you can see it. It will also be in the newspapers. The points will not change just because the prices do.

- When you buy, take the right amount of blue stamps out of the book. Do this in front of your grocer or delivery man and hand them to him. The grocer must collect a ration stamp, or stamps, for all the rationed processed foods he sells. Every rationed processed food will take points as well as money.

SHOW YOUR BOOK PLEASE

- Do not use more stamps than you need to make up the right amount. For example, if the food you buy calls for 13 points it is better to tear out an 8-point and a 5-point stamp than two 5-point stamps and a 2- and a 1-point stamp. Save your smaller point stamps for low-point foods. You can take the stamps from more than one book belonging to your household if you need to.

13 Points

- Every person in your household, including children of any age, has a total of 48 points to use for all these processed foods for one ration period. This means that you may use ALL the blue stamps marked A, B, and C from all the books during the first period. You may use as many of the blue A, B, and C stamps as you wish at one time. When they are used up you will not be able to buy any more of these processed foods till the next stamps are good. The Government will announce the date when the next stamps are good.

USE THE BLUE STAMPS WITH A, B, C ON THEM

IMPORTANT

You may use ALL the books of the household to buy processed foods for the household. Anyone you wish can take the ration books to the store to do the buying for you or your household.

A FAIR SHARE FOR ALL

We cannot afford to waste food or give some people more than their fair share. . . . That is why canned fruits and vegetables are rationed and that is why meat is going to be rationed. Rationing of some foods is the best and fairest way to be sure that every American gets enough to eat.

University of Illinois

75 Years Old

The University of Illinois opened March 2, 1868, with a faculty consisting of the Regent and two others and with 50 students.

This year the University of Illinois is the third largest in the Nation on the basis of full time enrollment. It has a faculty and staff of 2,427 and the November 1 registration was 11,495 students.

The University first admitted women in 1870.

In the 75 years since the University opened, some 150,000 young men and women have followed the footsteps of the first 50 who enrolled.

More than 10,000 former students of the institution are now in the armed services of the nation.

Approximately 500 of its faculty have left the campus to enter the armed services, or to engage in vital war work; many others still here are engaged in government sponsored war research projects.

A Naval Training Station for 2,000 officers and men is located at the University of Illinois, using University buildings and facilities to provide experts for the expanding American fleet.

Some 2,000 courses are offered each semester.

America's first church expressly for college students was established at the University in 1906, and the Religious Foundation movement, now world wide, began at Illinois in 1913.

Mass Production of Uniforms calls for

Electric Power

In making uniforms for the millions of men in America's armed forces—the Army, the Navy and the Marines—electric power is a vital force of mass production.

Electric knives and stitching machines cut out a number of uniforms at one time. High-speed electric sewing machines transform these cuttings into trim, comfortable, long-wearing uniforms. And electric irons apply the finishing touch with careful pressing and re-pressing to meet rigid inspection.

Electric power speeds the production of uniforms just as it speeds the production of tanks and ships and planes.

To keep pace with the mass production cutting machines, these tailors use high-speed electric sewing machines in putting uniform pattern pieces together.

American soldiers, sailors and marines on fighting fronts throughout the world are clothed in uniforms made at record speed with the aid of Electric Power.

On Maneuvers, February 17, 1943

Dear Mr. Semmler and Crew:

I have made several previous attempts to drop you a few lines of appreciation for sending me weekly, a copy of the News Bulletin, but duties have side tracked the issue, so kindly accept my belated thanks. I receive the News Bulletin regularly and look forward to its weekly arrival.

The weather down here has been very changeable the past month, recently a drop of seventy six degrees occurred within a period of three days. Lately we have been enjoying moderate southern weather, however the evenings have been quite cold, and the idea of falling out for reveille in the early hours of the mornings, is a dreaded and cold task. The experience of two men dressing in a pup tent within flat seconds and falling in rank in time for roll call isn't far short from being a miracle.

I would like to thank the Womens Service club for the Christmas package and to compliment them for sending a package full of essential needs for a fellow in the service. Many of the items I received are in use and certainly come in handy out here in the field.

Will close for now, hoping that all of you are in the best of health.

Sincerely,

Cpl. Dave Tierney, Co. B, 301st QM Bn. APO 403, Amex, care postmaster, Shreveport, La.

Feb. 22, 1943.

Dear friends:

Just a few lines to thank you for sending me the paper, also the nice Xmas package. I will admit it is quite late in thanking you for the Xmas package, but being a little busy, one slips up on a letter now and then. But I hope that I will stay in step with my correspondents from here on. I have been receiving the paper every week, on Mondays. So the news of Orland is never old. As for the Xmas package, it sure was appreciated. It made it look more like Xmas. Of course it didn't look very much like it out here in Colorado, because we had warm weather, and not a flake of snow on the ground. But it was still Xmas for us boys. We have had very nice weather all winter, of course I haven't been out very much in it, working in a hospital you don't get out side very often.

Before I close I want to thank you once again for everything that you have sent me.

Yours,

Victor W. Fisher,

THERE is a way to keep your golf game going to improve your play, to be a better golfer after the war is over and still not encroach in any way upon any part of the war effort, including transportation.

After all, there will someday be a peace—and when peace returns, golf with all other sports will come back with a tidal-wave effect that will dwarf the rush after the last war.

We took this matter up with Ed Dudley, president of the Professional Golfers' association, known as the PGA.

Here is the general idea—if you can't get to your club you can take indoor lessons or go to indoor schools.

If you can't do that you can swing a club in your own home, provided you have swinging room.

Tips From the Top

Here are a few suggestions from Ed Dudley, one of the finest swingers golf has ever known—

1. "Too many golfers think in terms of results, in place of correct swinging. They are packed with tension because they haven't a good swing—and they know it. They can at least improve their swing indoors.

2. "I would suggest first that they work upon a more comfortable stance, greater ease as they address the ball. Most golfers are stiff-legged and body-locked before they even start the backswing. Swinging indoors they can build up the habit of greater freedom.

3. "In these indoor lessons or indoor practice, golfers can concentrate entirely on the right way to swing. Golf is largely a matter of habit. Golfers who let a fault turn into a habit are in a bad way. But by practice they can learn to keep hands, arms, body, legs and feet more flexible. They can learn to turn more, to get their hands higher, to finish their backswing.

The Case of Bobby Jones

4. "Tension, of course, is the great curse of golf. Movement alone can check tension. Bobby Jones is the only golfer I ever saw who kept in motion as he started to address the ball. He was never locked. I have never seen him freeze over the ball as the vast majority do. Either his feet or hands were in some form of motion. Golfers, through indoor practice, can work over this feature. Don't ever stand over the ball and begin to freeze on the swing. Loosen yourself up. This can happen when you improve your swing, as you can indoors.

5. "Most golfers lack the needed gripping power in both hands. How can this be helped? I can tell you. Just lay aside 10 or 15 minutes a day where you work with an old golf ball in either hand, squeezing it and building up your finger strength. This sounds foolish? Well, I know two ballplayers who use this method—Lefty Grove, the pitcher, and Charlie Keller, the Yankee outfielder. They were smart enough to know how important it is to have hand strength or finger strength. Both have represented power in pitching and hitting respectively. This is a simple and an important exercise.

Interesting Work

"This is all interesting work," Dudley continued, "because golf is about 75 per cent mental. In golf you are not playing against an opponent. Your main opponent is yourself. You keep trying to make yourself do things that seem comparatively easy—such as smooth swinging, keeping your head down, etc. Each person is more interested in himself than in anyone else. The golfer usually beats himself. And he knows that. No opponent can ever keep you from making a two, a three or a four.

"Someone once gave the reason for Willie Hoppe's great record. The answer was this—the others played Hoppe—Hoppe played billiards. Hundreds of thousands of golfers know what to do—but they won't do it often enough.

"They all know they should take a comfortable stance, with a comfortable grip. They know they should never hurry the backswing, or hurry the downswing. They know they should keep their eyes and their minds on the target they are swinging at. Never mind the bunkers and the ponds ahead.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

WHEN Willie Hoppe won his first billiard title, Joe Louis hadn't been born, Eddie Plank was the American league's leading pitcher, DeWolf Hopper was on Broadway and a city speed demon was pinched for beating the eight-mile limit in New York.

In case your memory doesn't extend back that far, the year was 1906. Hoppe, 18, the boy wonder, conquered the great Maurice Vignaux for the 18.1 balkline world title in Paris.

Today, at 55, the same Willie Hoppe is more active in the game than he ever was as a stripling of 30 or 40. He is giving a far larger number of exhibitions on a tour of army camps than he did in the class days of balkline when he could play to a five-dollar top.

Mr. Billiards rolled up 14,000 miles in a four-month trip south and west. He has played as many as nine exhibitions in a day, averaged four, and for the first time finds himself booked solidly for as long as he cares to perform.

Fine Reception

"I'm having a more lively time, if you could put it that way, than I ever did," he says. "I mean there is so much excitement and enthusiasm in the camps that I get a lift myself. No one ever played to more responsive and appreciative audiences than the soldiers."

By sport's stopwatch, it's hard to realize how long Hoppe has been at the top. He has seen a generation of athletes shuffle on. As long ago as the early twenties, a writer pointed out that "At 36, Hoppe is the patriarch of the billiard world, the survivor of the old school."

This statement was made after he pulled the first of his so-called comebacks. He had lost the 18.2 balkline title in 1921, a title he had held since 1912. Young Jake Schaefer beat him. A nervous ailment bothered his shooting arm and he retired for six months. Returning in 1922 he defeated Young Jake in a five-way tournament which brought Hoppe $6,680.

Hoppe's career goes back further than his defeat of Vignaux. He was far from unknown, even then. Willie had toured the country in 1904 with Old Jake Schaefer, and managed to outclass "The Wizard" quite consistently. He was only eight when he started to play the game in 1896.

Triumphant Return

Willie bowled the best of 'em over when he came back from France and whipped the 18.1 title holder in America. He beat George Slosson (The Student) for a $5,000 purse and a $500 side bet. Two years later—in 1908—he beat George B. Sutton, 500-272, in Madison Square Garden for the 18.2 world championship.

He then relinquished both titles because he objected to the conditions governing play. In 1910, when the rules were changed, he took back both championships.

No one was able to catch Hoppe from then on until Young Jake caught up with his sore arm in 1921. In 1923 Welker Cochran looked good. He tied the old master, but lost in a playoff for the 18.2. Six months later Hoppe handed Cochran a one-sided defeat worth more than $6,500 to him.

The experts were ready to lay him away again in 1925, when he fell on the ice and his cue arm was badly cut. The next year Young Jake made it "inevitable" again when he won from Willie the 18.1 title he had taken from Ora Morningstar in 1912.

Ten years later, in 1936, Hoppe captured the 18.1 again, plus two other titles—the cushion carom and the three-cushion for the first time. Both Schaefer and Cochran were on the mourner's bench.

Recent Record

Willie has lost only one match in the past three years—to Art Rubin last winter in Chicago as he took the three-cushion title for the third time in a row. This year's tournament has been cancelled.

Billiards, particularly in its plebian form—pool, is an important part of army recreation, according to the camp. Almost every camp has at least a fair setup for pool and three-cushion billiards, which should help the future of the game

Eggs by the Pound Instead of by Dozen

Trend Favors Both Buyer and Seller

A trend toward selling eggs by the pound instead of by the dozen is becoming evident in some sections of the country, and this is profitable both to the producer and the consumer, in the opinion of Myrtle Murray, home industries specialist of the Texas A. and M. college extension service.

Under present marketing practices, the consumer pays as much per dozen for extremely small eggs as for standard eggs which weigh two ounces each, or a pound and a half per dozen. Likewise, Miss Murray explains, the producer who markets standard size eggs or larger receives no price advantages for a better product.

Until the public and the trade accept the change from the dozen to pound basis, producers will have to obtain their premiums by offering high quality clean, infertile eggs correctly prepared for marketing.

An Indiana farmer hitching up his team of mules. There's plenty of use for a team these days.

This means that eggs should be gathered at least twice a day and kept in a clean wire basket until they are cool and ready for packing. They should then be graded as to size, putting the uniformly small eggs, the medium (24 ounces to the dozen) and large ones in separate containers. They should also be candled, and sort out the defective eggs.

Eggs should always be packed with the pointed end down. If packing materials have been used previously, care should be taken to see that they are clean. Avoid wrapping eggs in newspapers.

Miss Murray recommends that eggs be marketed at least twice a week so that consumers can be assured of fresh produce.

Rabbits

California is the leader in rabbit production although no complete figures for the nation are available. It is known that in the Los Angeles trade area, 1,600,000 pounds of rabbit meat have been sold in one year. The U. S. Rabbit Experiment station is located at Fontana, Calif., where studies are being made in breeding, fur and wool production and marketing. Rabbit raising has thrived in the West because the mild climate permits open air hutches.

Most of the income is made by selling rabbits for meat. This compares favorably with other meats in protein. It has less fat and costs less per pound than expensive cuts of beef and lamb. This country has imported an average of nearly 91,000,000 pounds of dressed rabbit pelts and it would seem that there might be a bright outlook for selling furs and pelts. Efficiency studies show, however, that meat is the more dependable outlet. Because of the cost of stock, it requires more money to raise rabbits than poultry.

California raises more Angora rabbits than any other state. Much rabbit wool is imported and some California people have obtained a better price per pound for wool when it was spun into yarn at home and then sold to department stores.

Minerals for Hogs

Feed proper minerals to hogs at all times. Market hogs make cheaper gains, brood sows raise more thrifty pigs, and healthier hogs are produced when minerals are used. By using a protein supplement, such as a mixture of equal parts of cottonseed, peanut, or soybean oil meal with tankage, or shrimp meal, farmers can grow out their pigs and fatten their hogs with about half as much corn or sweet potatoes as when these feeds are used alone.

Family Benefits Under Social Security Plan

If you are a worker, have a Social Security card, and have regular deductions taken from your pay, you probably know that you, and your wife as well, when 65, will receive monthly payments based on your wages in covered employment if you are fully insured. Do you know, however, what family survivor's benefits accrue should you die before attaining 65? What provisions have been made under the Social Security Act for your family?

The following table illustrates the amount due your family until your children attain age 18, they must attend school at ages 16-17, and your widow when she is 65, if she has not remarried and is not working:

A widow under 65, with no children under 18, receives an immediate lump sum cash payment of six times the wage earner's monthly benefit. If no widow survives, a similar lump sum payment will be made to the children, divided between them, children of the deceased children or parents.

Lump sums are payable to persons who have paid the funeral expense if there is no one in the immediate family group entitled to monthly benefits or lump sum payment. Thus a friend might take care of your burial expense, if you were not survived by a family, and claim reimbursement based on the amount of payment as against the benefits computed on your wage record, in covered employment.

Grin and Bear It?

Maybe it ought to be the part of the citizens of this country to grin and bear it, and simply say: "We are at war—and that answers everything." Why, should we complain that bungling bureaucrats, in order to build up a great political machine for themselves, have manufactured devious methods of solving common sense problems? Why should we complain if they hire all of the theorists to formulate regulations and orders so complex that one versed in all the higher educative branches has a hard time figuring them out? What else could they have had in mind when manufacturing such work than to get a corner on all the swivel chairs in the nation to hold the fat rumps of political friends so that when time came for political announcements they would have plenty of people to do their bidding?

Take coffee. If suddenly the whole country was faced with the fact of giving it up, it wouldn't make an iota's difference to the war, yet the theorists, so called experts, have issued enough documents on the subject of coffee to have won this war. Then take the collection of tires by the government. The average motorist had one or two. He was forced to give them up at whatever price the government decided to pay, from 20 cents to $3. Now just when those tires would come in handy for most motorists, after we had been scared to death that there would be no more, we are told that we can have tires recapped. The recapping will cost us several times the highest price the government gave for the tires it confiscated.

Happily local rationing boards, Dallas, Texas, refused to bind motorists to the absurd A card regulation and proceeded to let the administration know that it had originated something that was not workable. But all of these involved things cost the people millions of hours of waste trying to comply; built up a great personnel of man power to be used in the wrong direction, and tied to swivel chairs thousands of men and women to manufacture the spiderwebs of involved and intricate orders. Millions of men and women, in order to discover what it was all about, had to spend valuable time running to some board or bureau. That waste effort alone is doing more damage to man and woman power than a war man power commission, if it were worth a tinker's malediction, which it is not, could undo in a hundred years.

It is not exaggeration to say that hundreds of thousands of copies of pamphlets and whole newspaper sized bulletins have been published, and are being published telling the whole cockeyed world how to do, and when to do, or how not to do and when not to do, everything under the sun from suckling the infant to skinning an elephant so as to get the most out of his hide. Thus we have millions of men and women running in rings doing what Washington tells them is essential to the war, and wasting enough man and woman power to have won the war.

If the American people are a praying people they need less to pray for the boys on the fighting fronts, altho God knows they need it, than they do to be delivered from the bugling of the bureaucracy.

MOKENA METHODIST CHURCH

Worship Service at 9:15 a. m. Sun. March 7 Topic, "The Climax of Dedication Week." We request that all the members attend the Dedication Sunday Service. This should be a great Day in our church. When we re-dedicate ourselves and our substance to the work of reconstructing a better world, 8,000,000 of the people called Methodist will meet in their churches, and make an offering which will go directly to war needs, such as helping prisoners of war without regard to nationality.

Church School 10:30 a. m. Miss Adeline Semmler General Supt. We have a fine group of loyal teachers, and are ready and willing to help your children. If you will bring them, and they are not in some other Sunday School.

The Women's Society for Christian Service will meet next week at the home of Mrs. Wm. Bradley. This is just one of the finest group of ladies you could meet anywhere. You are missing a good time that will bring you relaxation and enjoyment, if you are not present. Why not become a member, and help the good work along?

World conditions demand that every boy and girl receive religious instruction. If your child is not receiving such instruction, will you not help us by bringing them to our Church School?

Youth Fellowship Worship Service from 7:30 p. m. to 8:30 p. m. This service will be followed by a recreational period up to 10 p. m. Methodist Men will hold their business meeting and Worship Service from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m., followed by the recreation period.
